

“Security in every sense” is the motto of Motorysa and Avira – the best partner concerning computer security

The representative of Mitsubishi Motors in Colombia has been making this motto a reality in his daily work since 1967. Motorysa as an enterprise has to be as solid and reliable as the excellent Japanese automobiles he is in charge to market.

The engineers of the Motorysa IT department are used to the high level quality concepts of the brand they represent. This is why they were looking for an antivirus solution which is fast, effective and reliable. It is hardly surprising that they wanted to offer their users a work experience comparable to the feeling of security that people have while driving their cars.

A decision like this requires a great deal of caution. For this reason, the IT department at first acquired a few Avira licenses and replaced some existing licenses of another well known antivirus brand they had been using for years and installed them in a few special work centers. Shortly afterwards, tests were conducted in the heart of the enterprise's data infrastructure, because of the good results Avira provided in the initial deployment.

The results were quite satisfactory for the IT department.

"The high level of effectiveness, the compatibility with the working applications and the reliability of the product are qualities Avira offers," according to John Leal, the Motorysa system administrator.

"We saw it as a challenge to demonstrate the Avira products to an IT department as demanding as Motorysa. They found great advantages in the change to Avira. Of course, they had doubts at first, as they had been working quite a while with a more popular antivirus product, but the results spoke for themselves and now we are happy to have them as our customers," said Javier Fonseca, responsible for the activities of Avira in Colombia.

After the Avira products were proven in the heart of the Motorysa data center, the enterprise decided to install them in the whole company.

The deployment of Avira on all workstations and servers was quite simple and the Sogyo support accompanied some special requirements for the update system from the beginning. The results have been very positive.

The fast response time and the reliability of the Sogyo support department as well as the pre-sales advice and the service were "excellent" according to the Motorysa IT department.

"We appreciate customers who know something about quality and expect only the very best. That is why we are so proud to work with a company like Motorysa," said Mr. Fonseca.
